Your Need:

- To switch from a reactive fire-fighting to a proactive problem-solving risk & opportunity management stance
- To minimise the avoidable risks that may occur where risks are managed on a unit-by-unit basis and not with the overall interest of your entity in mind
- To establish a common language of risk & opportunity management from the Board to the Cleaner, thereby minimising expensive misunderstandings

The Old Way:

- Repeated investigations of what went wrong
- The Board of Directors only finds out about risks after they have become problems
- Technical units fail to see the relevance of their challenges for business support units and vice-versa
- Left hand does not know what the right hand is up to
- Increased risks of things going wrong & opportunities being squandered
